IMIA Monthly News Bulletin and Melbourne HBR Digest

The latest issue of the IMIA monthly email news bulletin has been sent to all subscribers, primarily IMIA members and colleagues who are on our database. In the interests of distributing the information more widely, the bulletin is also available at <http://t.co/9D8nZ98f> for those wishing to read it, but who are not on our current contacts database. We welcome feedback from colleagues and other readers.

Many of our members and contacts use various forms of web content curation, digests, etc. to collate and manage material from a wide range of sources. One of the newest is the scoop.it digest produced by the Health & Biomedical Informatics Research Unit at University of Melbourne, Australia and the IBES – Institute for the Broadband-Enabled Society. This curates the topic from blogs, tweets, videos and many other sources.

eHealth2012 Vienna, Austria

The eHealth 2012 (www.ehealth2012.at) conference will take place in Wien (Vienna), Austria, on 10–11 May, 2012.

The topic/theme of eHealth2012 is: Mobile Health & Care: Health Care everywhere. The call for submissions is open, with a deadline for submissions of January 15th, 2012. This event is organised by, among others, IMIA's Member Society in Austria, the Working Group Medical Informatics and eHealth of the Austrian Computer Society (OCG) and the Austrian Society for Biomedical Engineering (ÖGBMT) (<http://iig.umit.at/akmi/akmi.htm>). IMIA is a supporting partner in the event. The eHealth2012 conference connects, in particular, researchers from Austria, Germany and Switzerland in discussing the application of eHealth technologies in health care.

Full information will be on the conference website (mainly in German – although 'Google Translate' works well on it). The official conference language is German, but contributions can also be submitted and presented in English. Topics comprise, among others: ambient assisted living, electronic health records, health information systems, information security, quality and certification.
